Most of the first sewer systems in the United States were built as combined sewers (carrying both storm water and sewerage). They discharged into rivers, lakes and the sea without any treatment. The main reason for choosing combined sewers over separate systems (separating sanitary sewers from storm water drains) was a belief that combined sewer systems were cheaper to build than separate systems.

Definitely going to Art and Craft shows with my older sisters. I remember one at Columbia University and of course many at Lincoln Center. I had an older cousin who made incredible jewelry and belt buckles, almost with a western flair. Then seeing her makings for sale at these incredible shows....she lives on a huge farm.
